tive business as agents for some of the largest machine manufacturers in the United States.

Last year Campbell & Kelly, Inc. distributed $45,000 in wages to their force of between 16 and 20 men who draw the highest wages known in this country.

Among the leading patrons of this firm are the Desert Power & Mill Co. at Millers, Nevada Wonder, Tonopah Extension, West End, Belmont, Tonopah Mining Co., Goldfield Consolidated and the Tonopah & Goldfield railroad. In fact, any concern of importance south of Yerington and north of Las Vegas patronizes the Tonopah foundry and machine shops.

Campbell & Kelly, Inc. have also achieved an enviable reputation as designers and inventors of mining machinery, including their centrifugal pump specially adapted for the handling of sands and slimes. This pump is deservedly popular with mill men for accessibility of parts rendering repairs easily made and insuring long service. Many of these pumps have been in operation constantly for eight and nine months without requiring the slightest attention. The chief recommendation may be said to be the facility by which babbling can be renewed without requiring the presence of a skilled mechanic.

The Commonwealth contract calls for the installation of a plant treating 300 tons daily with 30 stamps of 1250 pounds each, three Harding mills, three tube mills 5x18 feet each and all other auxiliary equipment. They will also erect a Cross compound Corliss engine with direct connection capable of generating 600 kilowatts. This power plant ranks as 800 horse-power. The entire work will be done by experts from the Tonopah shops under the guidance and direction of R. J. Kelly.

In the operation of this home industry 25 tons of castings are used every month and one ton of bronze and brass is cast every month. In the three heats a week every variety is included but naturally specializing in material used in mining and milling. Since the first of the year an annex 30 feet long has been added to the foundry and a new brass furnace installed. For a perfect understanding of the magnitude of the industry it must be known that the pattern shop, 20x50 feet, is appointed with the most delicate and expensive wood-working machinery that is rapidly filling a store room for patterns measuring 30x50 feet. The foundry comprises an area of 3600 feet supplemented by a machine shop 60x90 feet.

The machine shop is a revelation to the visitor with its Titanic open side planer capable of trimming a section of any width 12 feet long with a swing of 11 feet in the clear or 22 feet between centers. Then there is a milling and gear cutting machine flanked by five lathes varying from 14 feet to 10 inches, a pipe machine, a power bolt cutter, drill presses and a compressor which supplies energy for the pneumatic tools. Electricity operates the heavier machinery. In addition to all these there is a complete equipment of small tools and an auto repair shop and garage where the most delicate adjustments can be effected with least possible loss of time and at a minimum of expense.

To find such an establishment in the heart of the desert fills the beholder with amazement and inspires confidence in the owners who build better than they knew when they stuck so tenaciously to Tonopah.

rivals in this marathon of mechanical skill.

The race was on and, when the flag dropped, Tonopah led all competitors with an easy grace that shamed some of the most famous firms of St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Denver, Salt Lake, San Francisco and Los Angeles. They were all there to pluck the plum of enterprise and, when the fiat went forth that Tonopah had won, congratulations were given without the slightest shade of envy. The David whose home nestled in the foothills of the Sawtooth range overlooking the San Antonio desert had humbled the Goliaths of engineering.

Campbell & Kelly are a brace of modest gentlemen whose diffidence is only equalled by their ability which actually amounts to genius. Right here, in Tonopah, they have established a business that will add as much luster to the name of their adopted town as a certain amber beverage has done for Milwaukee. No one will dispute this. Every day the firm is doing something towards this end, and their achievements to date make interesting human interest reading. Starting on a shoe-string, five years ago, sleeping, eating and working in a cramped little shop that threatened to topple over and engulf them in bankruptcy they struggled for bread and butter. Caring naught for fame or enduring monuments they simply asked for sufficient orders to keep a very hungry wolf from their door. About the time that other employees and most of the store keepers of Tonopah were turning over for their second beauty sleep Campbell and Kelly were toiling, sweeping, scouring and furnishing castings out of the pits and preparing for another day's monotonous grind. The only help they could afford was one moulder and an apprentice and it required all the rustling ability of the partners to keep enough work in sight to anticipate the weekly pay check. One month the payroll of $400 had to be met out of receipts of $166.

Talk of Wall street high finance! How they did it neither can tell, but they did. Picture to yourself $5.50 a day to feed and clothe four men in a new mining camp and you will understand the full meaning of hard times.

When gaunt panic strode across the desert and banks closed their vaults after cashiers and presidents had levanted to adjoining states; when merchants spoke of closing their doors and removing to other climes, Campbell & Kelly held down their shop with a fortitude that deserves highest reward. They filled all orders and met every obligation. They did not have a bed of roses either in practice or metaphor for, during their strenuous time they slept on cots and nursed a meal ticket that precluded pampered appetites. But they had the punch and the stick-to-it-iveness to win.

The Tonopah foundry and machine shops were established in 1906 during the wild promotion period when oily tongued adventurers sold stock in any old scheme and made their getaway before public credulity was aroused. Sixteen thousand dollars was subscribed towards a capital of $35,000 and, with the exhaustion of this fund, the company entered into a decline and ended its days in insolvency. Such was the status of affairs when H. P. Campbell and R. J. Kelly, two young machinists who came in with the railroad, concluded to try their arts on reviving the corpse. They entered into a lease and subsequently took possession under a sheriff's title. Since that memorable date the business of the foundry and shops has been conducted under the firm name of Campbell & Kelly Inc.

Never will either of these gentlemen forget the winter of 1907-8. Goldfield had passed through the throes of a labor revolution, mines had closed down, leasers left the country, capital drew its pursestrings tighter than ever when the mining game was suggested, and a dreadful silence hung over southern Nevada. The stillness of death prevailed and so intense was the quiet that the bark of a fugitive coyote sounded like a clap of thunder.

Such was the period that tried the souls of men and sent craven hearts back to the peaceful life of the plow.

For two years Campbell and Kelly drew board and clothing from their investment. Incidentally the clothes were not sartorial models. Overalls were not scorned. Either of the boys could have pulled his freight during that strenuous period and stepped into a life of comparative affluence at from $6 to $8 a day. Perish the thought. Not once did they entertain such an idea. They were optimists and they knew they were on the right track of wealth and independence. They had the consolation of knowing they were their own bosses although drawing down less than apprentice's wages. Furthermore they were buoyed up by one conviction which held them to their course as the mariner's compass steers the bark across stormy seas. They had faith in Tonopah.

That was all. But it was enough to cause them to grit their teeth with determination and swear they would win or walk out. As they travel in varnished cars when they are not skinning over the desert in their own high-powered automobiles the inference is plain. The firm is the possessor of a compact plant worth $62,000, not counting the value of patterns or good will, and occupy three acres on the Midway estate. They have facilities for casting objects weighing anywhere from three tons to the smallest threaded screw used in a machine shop. While their business runs to pieces of large dimensions they make it a point of honor not to neglect the smallest wants of customers. They also handle a lucra-
